

Keeping the power dry (again) for the 10th time

Wednesday, 03 August 2016

- The Bank of Thailand voted unanimously once again to keep its benchmark rate unchanged at 1.50% for the 10th meeting in line with our expectations, citing that economic growth is still recovering despite the greater downside risk felt from uncertainties in the global economy. Elsewhere, the bank iterated that inflation pressures may still return to the target band (1 – 4%) “slightly later than previously assessed due to weaker-than-expected energy prices”. We read this as a rhetoric to mean that average inflation print this year may well undershoot even the 1.0% handle. Note that as recent as June this year, BOT governor Veerathai Santiprabhob commented that headline inflation is still on track to reach the low end of this said target.
- Thailand appears to still enjoy the two key economic supports, namely public expenditure and tourism, while private consumption are still healthy on the back of improving income levels and household confidence. At least on this, the existence of these supports are key reasons in deciding to keep rates unchanged. Not only does these supports continue to limit the downsides from the consistently weak external environment, but the move to keep policy space in case of future exogenous and unexpected economic shocks may well give the policy makers the much needed room to manoeuvre further if necessary. Overall, the committee deemed policy as appropriately accommodative, and it stresses the existence of various policy tools to support economic growth if needed.
- At this juncture, we see little risk to our 2016 growth outlook of 3.2% given the existence of fiscal expenditure that would provide that much needed buffer especially in today’s global economic uncertainty. Elsewhere, tourist arrivals and private consumption should continue to support economic growth. On the inflation front, we recognise that much of the low domestic prices (+0.1% yoy in July) stemmed largely from exogenous factors like weak energy prices (-8.6% yoy), while core inflation still remains acceptable at 0.76% over the same period. As such, any rate cut in an attempt to lift inflation pressures may prove ineffective in doing so.

---

This publication is solely for information purposes only and may not be published, circulated, reproduced or distributed in whole or in part to any other person without our prior written consent. This publication should not be construed as an offer or solicitation for the subscription, purchase or sale of the securities/instruments mentioned herein. Any forecast on the economy, stock market, bond market and economic trends of the markets provided is not necessarily indicative of the future or likely performance of the securities/instruments. Whilst the information contained herein has been compiled from sources believed to be reliable and we have taken all reasonable care to ensure that the information contained in this publication is not untrue or misleading at the time of publication, we cannot guarantee and we make no representation as to its accuracy or completeness, and you should not act on it without first independently verifying its contents. The securities/instruments mentioned in this publication may not be suitable for investment by all investors. Any opinion or estimate contained in this report is subject to change without notice. We have not given any consideration to and we have not made any investigation of the investment objectives, financial situation or particular needs of the recipient or any class of persons, and accordingly, no warranty whatsoever is given and no liability whatsoever is accepted for any loss arising whether directly or indirectly as a result of the recipient or any class of persons acting on such information or opinion or estimate. This publication may cover a wide range of topics and is not intended to be a comprehensive study or to provide any recommendation or advice on personal investing or financial planning. Accordingly, they should not be relied on or treated as a substitute for specific advice concerning individual situations. Please seek advice from a financial adviser regarding the suitability of any investment product taking into account your specific investment objectives, financial situation or particular needs before you make a commitment to purchase the investment product. OCBC and/or its related and affiliated corporations may at any time make markets in the securities/instruments mentioned in this publication and together with their respective directors and officers, may have or take positions in the securities/instruments mentioned in this publication and may be engaged in purchasing or selling the same for themselves or their clients, and may also perform or seek to perform broking and other investment or securities-related services for the corporations whose securities are mentioned in this publication as well as other parties generally.

---

Co.Reg.no.:193200032W